MANAGER'S COMMENTS*MARKET OVERVIEW

Asia ex-Japan equities finished in negative territory in May, weighed down by a number of geopolitical developments. Poor investment sentiment and worries surrounding emerging markets saw south Asian countries underperformed. North Asian countries tend to do better, with the exception of Korea given the diminishing expectations for a resolution to tensions in the peninsula. China and Hong Kong posted positive returns and outperformed as macroeconomic data remained firm. Taiwan and Indonesia, where the central bank raised interest rates by a total of 50bps over the month, also held up better than wider index markets despite finishing in negative territory.

It was a mixed month for fixed income, as on one hand the political uncertainty in Italy and the risk of Eurozone contagion resulted in safe-haven flow with the US government 10-year yields falling 9bps; on the other hand, dented investors' sentiment also sent credit spread higher. As a result, Asian USD credit was flat, and high yield credit declined amid lower investor sentiment. Investment grade bond rose in absolute terms as they benefited from rising base yields. Elsewhere, Asian local currency bonds fell on the back of the broad USD strength. Indonesia was amongst the worst performer as the country's central bank raised policy rate twice during the month and signals a pre-emptive stance to defend financial stability to external volatilities.

Over the month, the Singapore dollar fell by -0.9% against the US dollar.
