RHB GLOBAL MACRO OPPORTUNITIES FUND - USD CLASS

The Fund aims to achieve capital appreciation above its benchmark by investing in one target fund, i.e. JPMorgan Investment Funds – Global Macro Opportunities Fund.

MANAGER'S COMMENTS*MONTH IN REVIEW

Risk sentiment improved in July, supported by stable growth, strong company earnings and diminishing market concerns on trade wars. The MSCI World Index rose 3.0% while the J.P. Morgan Global GBI fell 0.5% (both hedged to euro). The Target Fund delivered a negative return.

Markets became less concerned over the global growth backdrop, driven by stabilisation in data outside the US and some respite in trade tensions following initial talks between the US and Europe. In China, the authorities adopted a coordinated easing of policy in response to recent softer data, to which markets responded positively; however, the Target Fund Manager expects these measures to prevent a deceleration in growth rather than being explicitly expansionary.

The risk-on environment was unfavourable for the Target Fund Manager's defensive portfolio positioning, having shifted to reflect a more cautious outlook over the previous month. Equity markets and global bond yields moved higher, negatively impacting the Target Fund Manager's long US volatility and long US duration exposures, while the Target Fund Manager's long US dollar versus short South African rand strategy also detracted as high-beta emerging market currencies benefited from improving market sentiment.

Companies have delivered solid second-quarter earnings and, in the US, were helped by strong GDP growth. This provided further support to equity markets, and the Target Fund Manager's select stock exposures in US financials and global semiconductor equipment manufacturers performed well. However, low overall exposure to equity in the portfolio meant positive contributions were fairly muted and the Target Fund Manager's short-bias equity strategies, including short Europe and short Japan, detracted.

LOOKING AHEAD

The Target Fund Manager maintains the portfolio's defensive positioning in the context of certain areas of the market looking vulnerable to a reversion in this higher volatility, latecycle environment. The Target Fund Manager continues to run low levels of ex-ante portfolio risk as they see scope for trade tensions to intensify and for growth in China, emerging markets and Europe to disappoint. The Target Fund Manager is expressing these concerns through the Target Fund Manager's short exposures, while The Target Fund Manager maintains long equity exposures in technology and energy, which The Target Fund Manager feels offer potential to perform strongly given attractive valuations and secular drivers.
