MANAGER'S COMMENTSMARKET REVIEW

Although Singapore's economic growth has slowed down from 4.1% in the first quarter of 2018 to 3.4% in the second and third quarters, there are no signs that the trade conflict between US and China is causing a severe slowdown in Singapore's trade activities so far. The first round of tit-for-tat tariffs implemented in July 2018 has caused no significant deterioration in Singapore's exports to China.

In addition, while China is an important trade partner for Singapore, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's (OECD) data shows that Singapore's economic links with China is more service driven, with 60% of Singapore's value added in Chinese exports coming from the services sector. Thus, demand for financial services remained robust and the three major banks in Singapore have not seen a significant deterioration in their business outlook.

The Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) notes that the global economic outlook has become more uncertain compared to six months ago. The Target Fund Manager believes this is due to the inevitable cascading effect stemming from the economic vulnerabilities faced by the emerging markets, which has catalysed capital outflows from these economies and unsettled consumer and business confidence.

MARKET OUTLOOK & STRATEGY

As a relatively open economy, Singapore will also experience some turbulence if the US-China trade friction persists, or if the emerging economies remain fragile. As such, the Target Fund Manager had positioned the portfolio conservatively, preferring defensive sectors such as property real estate investment trusts (REITs), which are less affected by the global uncertainties. However, the Target Fund Manager sees some value emerging after the correction in October. In addition, one of the side effects of the trade war is the relocation of production to Southeast Asia. If this momentum is sustained, Singapore may experience some positive spillovers, such as trade related services or financial services. Thus, the Target Fund Manager has tilted the portfolio towards a more aggressive stance in November.
