MANAGER'S COMMENTS

MARKET OVERVIEW

The S&P 500 index fell 6.84% in October, bringing total year-to-date returns for the index down to 3.01% (total returns, in USD). October was a difficult and volatile month for equities, driven by various factors including a delayed response to the global rates sell-off earlier in the month, a moderation of growth expectations, less accommodative rhetoric from the US Federal Reserve (Fed) policymakers, and concerns around global growth and trade expressed in third-quarter earnings guidance. The correction in US equity markets resulted in tighter US financial conditions, which nonetheless remain easier than 2016. Minutes from the September FOMC meeting reiterated policymaker confidence in inflation remaining around target. Recent hard and soft data releases are consistent with the upbeat view of growth communicated by Fed officials. The US economy added 134,000 jobs in September and the unemployment rate declined to 3.7%, its lowest level in five decades. US GDP expanded 3.5% quarter-over-quarter (QoQ) annualized in the third quarter, slightly better than the consensus expectation for 3.3%. ISM surveys were also solid, with the non-manufacturing index rising to a cycle high of 61.6. The best performing sectors were Consumer Staples, Utilities and Real Estate while the worst performing sectors were Consumer Discretionary, Energy and Industrials.
