MANAGER'S COMMENTS

MARKET ENVIRONMENT

Asian high yield market registered modest gain in November backed by stable coupon income. There has been positive development on trade talks while on the other hand China's economic data in October continued to disappoint. Stable demand for yield kept movement in spreads rangebound during the month despite robust issuance year to date. In key economic developments, China's retail sales and new bank lending were slower than expected in October. Fixed asset investment growth was also weaker than market estimates for the January–October 2019 period. Meanwhile, exports and imports beat expectations. China's factory gate prices carried on with the downward trajectory, falling 1.6% in October from a year earlier. Conversely, consumer price index continued to rise - registering a 3.8% year-on-year increase. On the monetary policy front, China's central bank cut the interest rate on its one-year medium-term loans and the seven-day reverse repurchase rate. China also lowered its new benchmark one-year loan prime rate for the third time since it became the official lending benchmark in August. Selective administrative policy easing in property sector was also noted. Shenzhen government announced to adjust the value-added tax policy for the city's secondary housing market providing favourable tax treatment for residential units in certain specific categories. Elsewhere, India's GDP growth fell to 4.5% in Q3 from 5.0% in Q2 - slowest in more than six years. In Indonesia, economic growth slipped to its weakest level in more than two years.

TARGET FUND POSITIONING

Looking ahead, the Target Fund Manager remains cautiously constructive on the Asian High Yield market. The US and China trade dispute is likely to find some form of a resolution ahead of the 2020 US Presidential election. However, the news related to trade protectionism will create pockets of volatility; this will likely present itself as potential buying opportunities subject to careful issuers and securities selection. The intensified trade tension would likely push China to look inwards, in order to maintain social and economic stability, which is likely to lead to more target easing. Target Fund managers expect a relatively stable outlook for most of their invested corporates in the region given slower but benign economic growth outlook. However, ongoing trade tension and lingering funding stress at select Chinese industrial names could lead to diverging performance. Technicals are likely to remain supportive as investors explore for yield amid easing bias of central banks. Going forward, Target Fund Managers expect defaults to remain around 2-3% range in 2019 and 2020. However, they remain cognizant of increased appetite on the part of government to allow restructuring/defaults, in order to establish debt discipline precedence. Acknowledging potential volatility and risks, the Target Fund is overweight credit beta given current valuations offer attractive potential total return driven by income over a 12 to 15-month horizon. Target Fund Managers will continue to selectively and passively add risk while managing overall liquidity. In addition to its cash, the Target Fund has 10-15% market weight in short dated (<1year) /near-term callable bonds to ensure a robust liquidity profile and maintain high natural income, which also keeps overall volatility lower for the period ahead. In terms of duration, the Target Fund is now overweight.

DISCLAIMER:

Based on the fund's portfolio returns as at 10 November 2019, the Volatility Factor (VF) for this fund is 4.3 and is classified as "Low". (source: Lipper) "Low" includes funds with VF that are above 1.9 but not more than 6.5 (source: Lipper). The VF means there is a possibility for the fund in generating an upside return or downside return around this VF.
