MANAGER'S COMMENTS
SUMMARY

- Global equities fell in local-currency terms in March.
- Gross of fees, the Target Fund materially outperformed its index over the month.
- The Target Fund Manager initiated new long positions in Danaher and Ørsted.

MARKET BACKGROUND

Global equity markets endured further turbulence in March as investors priced in more significant economic impacts from the COVID-19 pandemic. Against this backdrop, the MSCI All Country World index fell 12.8% in local terms. Equities were weakest mid-month as a sharp decline in oil prices unsettled sentiment further. However, they rallied into month end, boosted by the US government's announcement of a $2 trillion fiscal stimulus package and a strong Chinese manufacturing PMI reading. This implied a sharp turnaround in business activity.

North American stocks mildly lagged the benchmark, despite the immensity of the accommodative measures from government and the Federal Reserve. The bank cut interest rates back to near zero and agreed a substantial stimulus package.

While broadly anticipated, a record number of unemployment claims caused a drag. European equities also underperformed, despite the European Central Bank's announcement of expanded asset purchases and widespread plans for fiscal stimulus among national governments. The fast spread of the virus across the continent unsettled investors. That said, early signs of stabilising infection rates in some of the region's worst-affected areas helped sentiment late on.

In the UK, stocks lagged their global peers in a month which saw sterling touch its lowest level against the dollar since 1985. The country's high exposure to energy and travel proved detrimental. Meanwhile, Japanese stocks held up significantly better than the benchmark as the Bank of Japan doubled its annual equity purchasing target and rolled out a new lending facility. Emerging markets were mixed, as the improving economic picture in China offset challenges in Brazil, where stocks were led lower by energy firms, miners and banks. All sectors fell during March, with energy struggling most as disagreements around production cuts caused significant downward pressure on the price of oil.

Financials also underperformed, reflecting the projected impacts of the coronavirus outbreak on global economic growth, and the attendant policy responses from central banks. Defensive sectors such as healthcare and consumer staples fared best as investors favoured their stable, more predictable growth profiles and relatively limited sensitivity to unfolding events.

ACTIVITY

During the month, the Target Fund Manager initiated a position in Danaher, a diversified life science tools company with a range of resilient businesses spanning scientific and technological areas. Its exposure to water quality and product identification provides further diversification. The Target Fund Manager believes that the company's growth trajectory and margins should meaningfully improve following its acquisition of General Electric's biopharmaceutical business, GE Biopharma, and the divestiture of its dental segment. With a high-quality management team and strong, sustainable spending levels in key markets, the company appears well positioned on a long-term view.

The Target Fund Manager also established a holding in renewable energy company Ørsted, which offers exposure to the secular opportunity in offshore wind as a developer and owner of farms. This is a rapidly, yet sustainably growing market - and the fastest growing within renewables generation. Ørsted exhibits relatively high barriers to entry and should benefit as climate-change policies drive renewable-energy targets higher and open up new markets. The Target Fund Manager views it as the clear leader in this sector. The company's scale drives cost leadership which, alongside its established track record and supply chains, should help it to continue winning project tenders.

To help fund these, the Target Fund Manager sold EOG Restheirces, a company engaged in the exploration and production of crude oil and natural gas. Recent challenges in the oil market bring into question EOG's ability to sustain its current levels of production. With structural factors also creating uncertainty around the shape of any recovery, the Target Fund Manager took advantage of the stock's mid-month rally to sell their holding. Additionally, the Target Fund Manager disposed of semiconductor manufacturer NXP. The Target Fund Manager's position was based on the company's position as a leading supplier in the auto and industrial internet-of-things (IoT) end markets, with over half of its sales attributable to these faster, structurally growing areas. Having first taken some profits in January, the Target Fund Manager elected to reallocate the remaining capital in March, given the limited visibility around when virus-related supply-chain disruption is likely to ease.

In the short book, the Target Fund Manager added to a position in a telecoms company while covering the short in a utility company.

MARKET OUTLOOK

These have been challenging times for equity markets, with the coronavirus sparking unprecedented reactions from governments, central banks, businesses and consumers globally. While many unknowns remain, the indiscriminate sell-offs have already created attractive opportunities to invest in companies with the ability to weather the current storm and win out over the long term. The Target Fund Manager's long-held belief is that there are structural factors driving a world which is 'lower for longer', including debt, demographics and technological disruption. The scale of recent economic interventions in response to the spread of the coronavirus only strengthens this argument. In this environment, the Target Fund Manager remains firmly of the view that companies which can sustain above-average growth rates should remain attractive for investors. The Target Fund Manager therefore retains their focus on companies with durable competitive advantages, as the Target Fund Manager believes these are best placed to continue delivering high returns and earnings growth across a range of market conditions. By contrast, the Target Fund Manager continues to seek businesses experiencing a secular decline or a deteriorating competitive position for the short book.
