RHB GLOBAL REAL ESTATE EQUITY FUND - RM CLASS

MANAGER'S COMMENTS*MARKET REVIEW

Global real estate equities continued their sharp decline in March as global equity markets felt the impact of the coronavirus outbreak. All regions finished the period in negative territory. Despite their relatively defensive attributes, Real Estate Securities underperformed broader equity markets as investors favoured less capital reliant sectors amid the sell-off. Furthermore, there are concerns that widespread store closures will severely impact tenant's ability to pay rents and test the resilience of cash flows in the retail sector.

MARKET OUTLOOK

The Target Fund Manager continues to focus on real estate equities with larger market capitalisations, a bias towards recurring income (rather than stocks biased towards development) and lower leverage. Most key physical property markets were in reasonable shape at the start of 2020. With some exceptions, there has not been excessive over-building and new supply could now be delayed further. Similarly, the balance sheets of most quality property equities were in a far stronger position before COVID-19 than was the case prior to the Global Financial Crisis. The coordinated policy initiatives by governments and central banks have been far-reaching and can be expected to evolve over the coming weeks and months. The stance that governments will “do whatever it takes” to alleviate the impact is to be welcomed. However, it is too early to gauge the effectiveness of the various measures and the continued uncertainty over the economic impact of the virus means the Target Fund Manager cannot be sure of the consequences for property markets and real estate equities.
