MANAGER'S COMMENTS

MONTH IN REVIEW

Markets sold off sharply and volatility spiked beyond levels seen during the Global Financial Crisis as the Covid-19 pandemic escalated and oil prices plummeted amid a price war.

The depth and breadth of the human and economic impact of Covid-19 escalated as the number of new cases and fatalities increased and lockdown measures expanded to around a third of the global population. The impact of containment showed in high frequency data, such as electricity usage and travel and leisure activity, and a historic spike in US jobless claims. In this environment, the Target Fund Manager sought to maintain low net equity exposure. Initially, the Target Fund Manager expressed this through long US equity put options but as volatility became more expensive the Target Fund Manager switched to short US index futures, which added value over the month. The Target Fund Manager also added long Japanese yen and gold exposure for their defensive properties.

Governments and central banks announced unprecedented fiscal, monetary and liquidity support. Despite this, markets remain significantly lower on the month as the depth of recession and path to recovery remain unknown. The US Federal Reserve's significant liquidity provision led us to introduce short US dollar exposure, while the Target Fund Manager took profit on short Canadian dollar and short South African rand, which had worked well due in part to central bank easing and commodity price sensitivity.

Oil posted its largest quarterly decline on record in Q1 after Saudi and Russia entered into a price war, with both pledging to increase supply at a time when Covid-19 has caused a significant drop in demand. This weighed heavily on emerging market currencies and led us to close the Target Fund Manager's long Mexican peso and Russian ruble exposures. Within equity, the most impacted of the Target Fund Manager's holdings were their select European utilities names, which the Target Fund Manager maintains as they are well supported by the transition to a lower carbon world.

The Target Fund Manager took advantage of market moves to adjust their physical equity positioning, reducing cyclical exposure and focusing on their favoured secular trends, such as the acceleration in cloud computing and ecommerce, through high conviction, highly liquid names.

LOOKING AHEAD

Covid-19 has catalysed a global recession, the depth and duration of which are unknown. The Target Fund Manager maintains a cautious stance, with low net equity exposure, a focus on high quality names, defensive currency exposures and a long gold strategy.

The Target Fund Manager remains flexible to adjust positioning should the macro shift. Along with high frequency activity indicators, the Target Fund Manager continues to monitor closely virus testing and cases by country, the duration of lockdown measures and any indication of the exit strategy, as well as developments on potential medical solutions.
