MANAGER'S COMMENTS

MONTH IN REVIEW

Global equity markets further extended last month's gains, supported by a stabilisation in Covid-19 infection rates, allowing many countries to ease mobility restrictions and economies to reopen, as well as optimism over positive medical developments. The MSCI World rose 4.6%, while the JPM Global GBI was down 0.2% (hedged to euro).

Risk assets performed well, as many economies are reopening faster than anticipated, with mobility restrictions easing amid a stabilisation in new virus cases. Global purchasing managers' indices showed an improvement in activity from historic lows, while sentiment was further supported by vaccine optimism and positive developments on coordinated fiscal efforts in Europe. The Target Fund Manager's long equity exposure contributed positively, particularly data processing and software technology names. The Target Fund Manager's select European utilities were supported by the collective regional response reflected through the European recovery fund proposal, which has a focus on green investment.

In reflection of many countries moving into recovery, albeit from a low base, the Target Fund Manager introduced more cyclical exposures through select financials and consumer discretionary names, and long US financials and industrials versus short consumer staples and utilities via futures. These changes, in addition to the Target Fund Manager's long US small cap equity versus short Nasdaq strategy added last month, provide protection from a potential rebound in value due to its underperformance so far this year. In currency, the Target Fund Manager reflected more cyclical exposure by reducing their short Australian dollar position.

Risks still remain to the outlook, as optimism regarding a vaccine solution to the virus appears stretched, based on historical development timelines, and the reopening of economies could prompt a second wave of infections. Re-escalating US-China tensions further adds to uncertainty. Against this backdrop, the Target Fund Manager maintained some protection from a correction through short-bias equity exposure in the US and long Japanese yen, which detracted in the month. The Target Fund Manager continued to hold gold to reflect the low real-yield environment and the position's defensive properties, which added value.

LOOKING AHEAD

The Target Fund Manager continues to monitor the lifting of lockdown measures and potential for a second wave of infections to understand the potential path of reopening the economy. The Target Fund Manager also continue to monitor medical developments, which have the potential to significantly shape the outlook.

While the Target Fund Manager has sought to add some cyclical to the portfolio and introduce more relative value strategies in favour of taking a large directional position, the Target Fund Manager remains flexible to more sizeably adjust overall risk as the macro shifts.
