MANAGER'S COMMENTS
MARKET REVIEW

Emerging markets rallied strongly in July despite further acceleration in new Covid-19 cases in some countries and an escalation in US-China tensions. US dollar weakness, and a continued recovery in economic data amid ongoing monetary and fiscal support boosted sentiment.

Following on from June, emerging equities strongly outperformed their developed counterparts, led higher once more by index heavyweights China and Brazil. China's approach, at least so far, suggests that through adopting a blend of targeted measures, a partial recovery is possible until a vaccine becomes widely available. An inflection in sentiment towards Brazil together with signs of reform progress saw its bourse bounce sharply. Elsewhere, Taiwan was a bright spot, driven by ongoing strong demand for technology names.

Within fixed income, a benign inflationary backdrop, supportive policy, and a weakening US dollar saw hard currency, local currency, and corporate debt all register gains over the month.

MARKET OUTLOOK

With a backdrop of ongoing global easing, the path of the US dollar remains key for emerging markets, although short term moves are hard to predict in an environment of volatile geopolitics and lingering threat of coronavirus. Adding to the uncertainty are increasing trade barbs between China and the US and, as the US election draws closer, as the Target Fund Manager has already seen in the last few days, the incentive to increase the rhetorical temperature rises.

Overall the Target Fund Manager is comfortable with their current positioning, retaining a bias for quality corporates and sovereigns which are well placed to continue to capture any rebound, whilst providing some comfort should the situation deteriorate.

With this in mind, the Target Fund Manager continues to tilt the portfolio to areas of the market that exhibit high potential growth, and countries that have dealt decisively and effectively with the initial bout of the coronavirus. Looking forward, increasing dispersion between countries, regions and companies is likely, requiring an ever more selective and active approach to capitalise on evolving opportunities, and navigate the risks.
