MANAGER'S COMMENTS
MARKET REVIEW

Emerging market (EM) equities posted a solid gain as expectations for additional fiscal stimulus in the US increased. It followed a widening of US Democratic Party candidate Joe Biden's lead in opinion polls, ahead of the 3 November election. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index increased in value and outperformed the MSCI World.

Indonesia was the best performing EM market, as the approval of the Omnibus Law boosted sentiment. The Philippines, where Covid-19 restrictions were further eased, Mexico and China were the only other markets to outperform the EM index. In China, strong performance from internet stocks was beneficial. The prospect of more stable trade relations with the US under a prospective Biden presidency also proved supportive for stocks.

The performance of EM bonds was mixed. Hard currency (US dollar)-denominated bonds were flat after a late pullback, mainly in high yield, while EM corporate bonds made a modest positive return. Local currency bonds were also moderately positive. EM currencies were again mixed, but slightly higher overall. The Chinese renminbi and Thai baht performed well, while the Turkish lira and Brazilian real weakened.

MARKET OUTLOOK

With a backdrop of ongoing global easing, the path of the US dollar remains key for emerging markets, although short-term moves are hard to predict in an environment of volatile geopolitics and the lingering threat of coronavirus. With the US election fast approaching, and political noise levels unusually high, the Target Fund Manager's focus is more on country analysis and security selection as the uncertain backdrop continues to throw up unusual opportunities.

Overall, the Target Fund Manager is comfortable with their current positioning, retaining a bias for high quality corporates paired with an increasingly selective approach to sovereigns as emerging market fiscal conditions deteriorate in the wake of coronavirus.

Looking forward, increasing dispersion between countries, regions and companies is likely, requiring an ever more selective and active approach to capitalise on evolving opportunities, and navigate the risks.
