MANAGER'S COMMENTS

MARKET REVIEW

The Fund registered an increase of 1.17% on month-on-month basis compared to the benchmark index which was up by 0.19%. The increased was contributed by gains in AAC Technologies Holdings, ENN Energy Holdings and Downer EDI Ltd. The Fund overweight China and Australia. Sector-wise, the Fund overweight Industrial Products and Technology sector.

In the December FOMC meeting, the Fed announced the start of its QE tapering, worth USD10b starting in January 2014. The Fed's minutes stated that Fed will continue to reduce its bond buying program in measured steps if the economy improves. However, it also pointed to the Fed's flexibility in reducing its QE program as they asserted that the purchases "are not on a pre-set course" and they could adjust the pace based on jobs and inflation outlook. The equity market cherished the announcement as Dow Jones Ind.Avg was up by 3.05%, Nikkei increased 4.02%, DAX Index was up by 1.56% and FTSE 100 Index was up by 1.48%.

China's official non-manufacturing PMI eased for the second consecutive month in Dec, pointing to a further slowing of non-manufacturing activity in line with the moderation seen in manufacturing. The index fell from 56.0 in Nov to 54.6 in Dec, the lowest in four months, suggesting that the economy may remain in the stage of stabilization. Hang Seng Index closed lower by 2.41% month-on-month basis.

Dec was a strong month for the KLCI as it traditionally has been, as the index scaled new all-time highs on numerous occasions on the back of window dressing activities and investors building positions ahead of 2014 and the January effect. The announcement of a tapering of $10 billion per month failed to cool down the local market in December. For the month, the KLCI gained 2.99% to close at 1,866.97, near an all-time high of 1,872.52pts achieved on 30 December 2013. Average daily value traded on Bursa in Dec was a whopping 58% higher mom at RM3.21bn, which includes a 4bn (volume) off-market transaction for Maxis.

We remained focus on investing in good quality companies with resilience earnings while continue to hold on to our main thesis of investing on population growth, urbanization, and increasing intra-regional trade. Hence our focus is on stocks that are of top quality within each sector while continue to invest in good cash flows companies.
