RHB-OSK CAPITAL PROTECTED SECTOR STRATEGY FUND (formerly known as OSK-UOB CAPITAL PROTECTED SECTOR STRATEGY FUND)

This Fund aims to provide capital appreciation over the medium term whilst protecting investors' capital on the Maturity Date.

Top 10 holdings includes McDonald's Corp, Amazon.com Inc, Comcast Corp, Walt Disney, Home Depot Inc and Ford Motor.

Singapore dollar was down 0.59% against the US dollar this month.

Malaysia Government Securities ("MGS") performance in December was mostly bearish bias as investors took profit for the year. At close, the 3-, 5-, 7-, 10-, 15-, 20- and 30-year MGS were traded at 3.33% (November: 3.09%), 3.69% (3.61%), 3.98% (4.04%), 4.08% (4.07%), 4.50% (4.27%), 4.55% (4.45%) and 4.92% (4.75%) respectively. Meanwhile, Ringgit corporate bond flows further weakened to RM313m average daily trade in December, from RM408m reported last month. Secondary market saw interest mostly skewed towards the GG/AAA segment (49%), followed by AA (48%) and A segment (3%).

On the domestic economic front, trade surplus for October narrows slightly to RM8.23bn (Sep: RM8.66bn) as import outpaced exports. October Industrial Production ("IP") also up sequentially to 1.7% YoY (September: 1.0% YoY) on higher manufacturing and mining activities, in line with strong export demand. While it is still too early to be sure, the October data does hint at a pick-up in 4Q2013 GDP. Lastly, November CPI ticks up to 2.9% YoY (October: 2.8%), mainly led by food and non-alcoholic beverages. This comes as no surprise as sugar subsidies was removed in the 2014 Budget announcement.

As for outlook on the local bond market, by comparing the number of MGS/GII tenders in 2014 versus 2013, trends are generally quite similar with more frequencies of auction within the 10-year segment (6 tenders in 2014 compared with 5 in 2013). Higher UST yields in 2014 as US tapering talks unfolds combined with inflation concerns may potentially influence a steepening bias MGS curve in 2014. But we opine the impact of steepening however could be moderated by benign supplies in 2014. Volatility should persist into 1H2014 and overall yields are expected to rise. Bond prices could face re-pricing risk in the face of healthy primary issuances.
