MANAGER'S COMMENTS

MARKET REVIEW

US Treasuries ("UST") bearish flattened in June, as consumer price inflation was warmer than expected in May. However, geopolitical tension in the Middle East kept the 10-year UST firmly at 2.53%, as investors sought for safe heaven protection. At close, the 2-, 5-, 10- and 30-year UST were traded at 0.46% (May: 0.38%), 1.63% (1.54%), 2.53% (2.48%) and 3.36% (3.33%) respectively.

Despite the sharp downward revision of 1Q2014 GDP to -2.9% YoY in June (from -1.0% YoY last month), most of the economic data released in June was pointing to a modest recovery. Both ISM Manufacturing Index as well as Industrial Production ("IP") came in stronger than expected in May, with the former reporting at 55.4 (Apr: 54.9, consensus: 55.5) and the latter at 0.6% MoM (Apr: -0.3% MoM, consensus: 0.5% MoM). The manufacturing sector appears to be making a comeback. Employment situation was largely unchanged with unemployment rate held steady at 6.3%. Consumer Price Index ("CPI") was warmer than expected in May, with the index posting a 0.4% MoM gain (Apr: 0.3% MoM, consensus: 0.2% MoM).

Two out of the 3 housing indicators also posted gain in May, with the New Home Sales at 504k in May (Apr: 425k, consensus: 441k) and Existing Home Sales at 4.9% MoM (Apr: 1.5% MoM). Although Housing Starts took a step back in May, reported at only -6.5% MoM (Apr: 12.7% MoM), the 1.001mil unit pace was up 9.4% on a YoY basis. Nevertheless, the housing sector is trending upward, where the Q2 starts are still running above the Q1 average, pointing to an improvement of residential investment in Q2 GDP.

Lastly on the FOMC meeting announcement, the bond purchases were cut by another USD10bil to USD35bil in July. The FOMC forecast lowered the 2014 GDP projection to 2.1 – 2.3%, from 2.8 – 3.0% in March, largely due to the harsh winter drag in 1Q2014. On the other hand, Fed raised the PCE inflation and Core PCE inflation forecast upward by 0.1% to 1.5 – 1.7% and 1.5 – 1.6% respectively (from 1.5 – 1.6% and 1.4 – 1.6%). During the Chair press conference, Yellen mentioned taper is still on gradually but policy rates are not likely to rise until in 2015. However, inflation may now be on the radar but the labor market is the key focus and inflation might be transitory. Uncertainty on monetary policy has increased somewhat.

We envision a weaker bond market in 2H14 as the economic data and growth outlook from US will improve. While, the Fed had pledged to keep interest rates low, it is possible that they could surprise the market if economic data releases show strong indication of a permanent recovery.

DISCLAIMER:

As this is a close-ended fund, units are no longer available for sale on the basis of the Prospectus dated 25 March 2013. Investors are advised to read and understand the contents of the Prospectus dated 25 March 2013, which has been registered with Securities Commission who takes no responsibility for its contents, before investing.
