MANAGER'S COMMENTSMARKET REVIEW

It was a volatile month for US Treasuries ("UST") as geopolitical events in mid-month and strong US 2Q14 GDP numbers at month end pushed the 10-year UST to both extreme ends. 10-year UST plunged to 2.44% at the height of geopolitical tension and subsequently rebounded back to 2.56% as 2Q14GDP surprised on the upside. At close, the 2-, 5-, 10- and 30-year UST were traded at 0.53% (June: 0.46%), 1.75% (1.63%), 2.56% (2.53%) and 3.32% (3.36%) respectively.

Again, most of the data released in July pointed to a modest recovery in the States. Unemployment rate further declined to 6.1% in June (May: 6.3%) indicating that 2Q14 indeed was regaining momentum in the labor market. New orders continue to flow in with June ISM Manufacturing Index reported at expansion territory of 55.3 (May: 55.4) although Industrial Production ("IP") weakened slightly to a 0.2% MoM gain in the same month (May: 0.5% MoM). Nevertheless, for the 2Q14 as a whole, IP rose at an annual rate of 6.7% after increasing only 1.4% in the 1Q14, suggesting that 2Q14 GDP is likely to rebound. Inflation indexes continue on the warm side, with Consumer Price Index ("CPI") reporting 0.3% MoM gain in June (May: 0.4% MoM) and Producer Price Index – Final Demand ("PPI-FD") at 0.4% MoM (May: 0.3% MoM). On YoY comparison, both CPI and PPI-FD are pressing right at the 2% threshold with the former reported at 2.1% YoY and the latter at 1.9% YoY. On the housing sector, both Housing Starts and New Home Sales disappoint sharply in June. Housing Starts dropped 9.3% MoM (May: -7.3% MoM) while New Home Sales came in at an annual rate of 406k (May: 442k). The drop in sales is observed in all regions.

The first sight of the 2Q14 GDP was released and the economy expanded by 4.0% annualized (1Q14: -2.1%). The rebound was led by inventory growth. Overall, the 2Q14 numbers point to a return to forward momentum after the deep freeze of 1Q14. Federal Reserves ("Fed") cut another USD10bil asset purchases in latest Federal Open Market Committee ("FOMC") meeting as scheduled. Policy rates are unchanged and are to remain low for a "considerable time" after the end of taper.

The rebound in 2Q14 US GDP supports our view that the 1Q14 weakness was temporary. We expect the economy to grow at an above trend through 2015. Economic fundamentals have improved, fiscal drag is fading, and financial conditions are providing a significant tailwind to growth. Inflation is likely to remain quiet, despite some higher readings earlier this year. The Fed is in the process of revising its exit principles, but we do not expect the Fed to hike rates until 2H15.

On the European front, the recent developments in Ukraine and the persistence of a strong EUR indicate that the balance of risks to economic activity remains skewed to the downside, notwithstanding better signs from the US and China. We are not making any changes to outlook for ECB monetary policy and continue to expect that the persistence of low and below target inflation, with a fragile recovery, will lead the ECB to launch a large-scale asset purchase programme by end of this year.
